Dear Dr. Henney -

The new genetically engineered foods are of great concern to me and my family. These foods have yet unknown risks to families, farmers, to the environment and the nation's health.

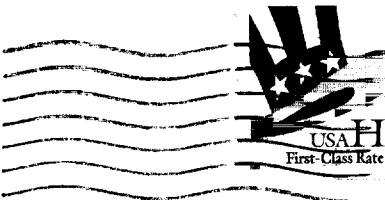

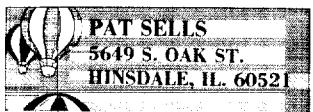

If indeed some foods have reached the markets, it is our right to have complete and prominent labels -

It is important to know that the FDA is living up to its mandate to protect public health and that they will provide consumers with information about our food -

Thank you for your consideration, Pat Sells
